Green Campus Day Celebration Report

Introduction: Green Campus Day, celebrated annually, is a special event aimed at promoting sustainability and raising environmental awareness within educational institutions. The event provides an opportunity for campuses to engage in various activities and initiatives that contribute to a greener and more sustainable future. This report highlights the celebration of Green Campus Day and the activities that took place.

Objective:

- To educate and mobilize people about the detrimental impact of plastic pollution on the environment and human health
- To encourage them to take action to reduce and eventually eliminate single-use plastics.

Event Highlights:

The event kicked off with an opening ceremony, which included speeches by the Principal Dr Sanjay Mishra emphasizing the importance of sustainability.

The ceremony also featured a symbolic tree planting to signify the commitment to environmental conservation.

Tree plantation activity:

The activity was planned well in advance, involving collaboration among the campus administration, student organizations, and environmental enthusiasts.

A suitable location for tree planting was identified, taking into consideration factors such as available space, soil quality, and sunlight exposure.

Volunteers and Participants:

The tree plantation activity was open to students, faculty, staff, and volunteers from the campus community. Efforts were made to encourage maximum participation by promoting the event through posters, social media, email notifications, and word-of-mouth.

On the designated day, participants gathered at the specified location, where the required tools, saplings, and safety equipment were provided. A brief introduction was given about the importance of tree planting, the selected tree species, and the proper techniques for planting and caring for the saplings.

Volunteers were divided into teams, each responsible for planting a certain number of saplings. With the guidance of experts or trained individuals, the participants dug holes, placed the saplings carefully, and ensured proper backfilling and watering.

Posters, banners, and digital displays were placed strategically around the campus, showcasing key sustainability messages and promoting eco-friendly habits.

Information booths were set up where students and staff could learn more about sustainable initiatives, ask questions, and receive educational materials.

Campus Clean-up Drive:

A campus clean-up drive was organized, where volunteers gathered to collect litter and promote a clean and green environment. Participants were provided with gloves, trash bags, and other necessary equipment to ensure safety and effectiveness. The clean-up drive not only improved the campus aesthetics but also fostered a sense of responsibility among participants.

Awards and Recognition:

As part of the celebration, digital certificates were issued to all the participants who had demonstrated outstanding commitment to sustainability on campus.
